

Escape to St. Simon's Island, GA: Fond memories of spectacular sunrises, sumptuous shrimp and sweet southern charm.

By Jennifer Price Easterling

I've come to realize, after six years of children, every woman needs an escape, her "Eat, Pray, Love" experience. No need to divorce or travel to Bali ...just a deserving respite away from a demanding schedule to remember how luxurious peace and quiet is. St. Simons Island lavishes its visitors with Southern hospitality making one feel like a celebrity, especially if you are staying at the King and Prince Resort.

Between the rich dining and the lavish accommodations I almost thought I was royalty. It wasn't hard to pretend I was someone special during my aromatherapy massage at the resort's Royal Treatment Cottage. I recommend being checked in before the Friday night seafood buffet, a must. Ask for a Cabana Room with luxurious designer décor, modern elegance and an ocean view to dream about.

No need to set the alarm clock, leave the curtains open for the sunrise to beckon you out your French doors for a morning walk.

St Simon's Island has endless opportunities to dine in local hotspots that infuse southern cuisine into their signature gourmet dishes, and more opportunities to meet colorful local characters like 'Cap' Fending, who runs the local Lighthouse Trolley tours and Cap'n Larry Credle, who runs educational shrimp boat excursions on the Lady Jane. Also you wouldn't be considered an islander if you hadn't met Mildred Huie Wilcox, the local Left Bank Art Gallery owner and daughter of the well known southern artist Mildred Nix Huie, who befriended author Eugenia Price. If you want to hear southern stories of love, history and St. Simons, pull up a chair and spend some time with these pillars of the community.
